RECURRING REVENUE

Section 1: The Service You Provide

Before a single penny changes hands, you deliver undeniable upfront value. The audit is your weapon — it shows the prospect exactly where they are bleeding money and why they need you today.

Step 1 — Day 0 Audit

Claim or create the Google Business Profile. Screenshot every metric before you touch anything. This is your baseline — your proof of transformation.

Step 2 — Audit PDF

Use AI + Canva to produce a polished, branded audit PDF. Present this on the sales call as upfront value before asking for anything in return.

Step 3 — Metrics Sheet

Build the full Google metrics tracking sheet live with the owner during the call. Their data, their numbers — makes it real and personal.

The Audit Checklist

Every item below is publicly available — no logins, no tools required. Run this before every sales call and walk in with more knowledge about their business than they have.

✓ Visibility Checks

- Google Maps ranking — manual search in private/incognito window
- GBP completeness assessment — publicly visible fields
- Review count and star rating — publicly visible
- Competitor analysis — publicly visible search results

✓ Technical Checks

- Website speed via PageSpeed Insights — free, no login required
- NAP consistency check across directories — manual search
- Website quality assessment — just look at it critically

 All of this takes under 30 minutes and positions you as the expert before the call even begins.

Now ask the owner questions to complete the audit

"I'm going to ask a few questions about the business, and i going to ask for the full picture as this is the only way I'm to know if I can help you or not. If I believe we can help you, I'll proceed with an offer. Sound good?"

"Where would you be today if you had a solution 6 months ago, why have you never tried a solution like ours before?"

Make them realise they have a big problem that needs fixing and the solution is sitting right in front of them.

Step 1: Gain Website Access

1. Once they agree If they already have a site Use whois.domaintools.com to find the domain registrar e.g IONOS. Most common providrrs and how to get access:

WordPress

- Admin login (their URL + /wp-admin).
- Ask for Administrator role, not Editor.

Wix

- They add you as a Contributor in Wix dashboard → Roles & Permissions

Squarespace

- They invite you as an Administrator via Settings → Permissions

No Website Yet

If they don't have a website, you handle hosting and domain and charge for this.

Help them find their login for their login for the domain registrar platform

Website Build Stack

We build a hybrid CMS + custom logic setup — a lean, fast, lead-generating machine. Always download the original website files before touching anything. Then build on top of a proven stack.

WordPress + Kadence / Astra Theme

Instant quote button above the fold. Bold review count badge. Marketing positioned on quality work, not cheap work. The site sells trust before the phone rings.

Tally Instant Quote Form

Option A: Custom React/JS component embedded directly — handles form collection and calculation internally. No Tally needed. Cleanest approach. Option B: Tally form routed via Make.com webhook to a Cloudflare Workers serverless function — fastest to ship.

Make.com Automation

Fires immediately after quote submission: (a) Email to owner with all details + photos + indicative price. (b) WhatsApp Business SMS to owner. (c) Confirmation email to customer with price range and call-to-action. (d) HubSpot contact record created automatically.

HubSpot CRM

Every customer's name, number, job type, and date logged automatically. That contact list compounds in value over time — it becomes a retargeting and reactivation asset.

Rank Math SEO + Hosting

Rank Math installed for on-page SEO. Hosting on whatever the client already has, or the cheapest available option. SSL, backups, and uptime monitoring all included in your recurring service.

The Instant Quote Calculator Logic

The calculator runs entirely in JavaScript — no backend, no database, no API calls. The result appears instantly in the browser. The owner provides a pricing matrix: base price per job type plus multipliers for variables. Below is a real fencing example.

Fencing Quote — Example Form Path

1. Address first
2. Service type dropdown
3. Work type: new / repair / removal
4. Fence length (metres)
5. Terrain type: flat / sloped / hard
6. Material type selection
7. Old fence removal: yes / no
8. Gravelboard option: yes / no
9. Number of gates
10. Text description + photo upload
11. Enter email to receive quote instantly

✔ Serious buyers have this information ready.
Complex forms filter out time-wasters automatically.

Pricing Matrix Example

Base price (wood + concrete post, 10m, flat terrain): £600

- Extra length per 5m: +£200
- Hard terrain multiplier: ×1.25 on labour
- Old fence removal: +£150 flat
- Gravelboard: +£8/m
- Each gate: +£180

Result range: base ×0.9 to base ×1.15

"Based on what you've described, this job typically costs £780–£950 + VAT. This is an indicative estimate only. Final price confirmed after site survey."

Section 2: Agency Setup & Prospecting

The agency infrastructure is not what makes you money. Prospecting and outreach do. Set up fast, spend minimum time on branding, and get to conversations as quickly as possible.

Pick Agency Name + Buy Domain

Buy a cheap domain. Set up Google Workspace for professional email, Google Slides, Docs, and Gmail under your agency domain. Design a logo quickly — Canva is fine.

Build Your Prospect List

Start with warm introductions from people you know. Then manually search online directories. Use prospecting tools like Apollo, LeadSwift, or Lead Gorilla. Or hire someone on Fiverr to build the list for you.

Set Up Meeting Infrastructure

Zoom or Microsoft Teams for client meetings. Your website is not make-or-break at this stage. Do not over-invest here — every hour spent on your website is an hour not spent on outreach.

BAM Outreach Strategy

Bare-Ass Minimum: set a non-negotiable daily outreach number. Cold call first — it converts better. Cold email as a supplement. You are not selling the service on outreach — you are getting them on a call. That is the only goal.

The Offer Framework

The offer is how you package everything between where the client is today and where they want to be. It must have five components to be compelling, credible, and closeable.

Research what other agencies charge before setting your pricing. A monthly retainer plus a one-time setup fee is the most common and defensible model for this type of service. The recurring revenue compounds — protect it with a strong contract and retention mechanics like website hosting dependency.

The Sales Call Structure

Meetings will start filling your calendar from outreach. Your job is to convert them to paying clients. Every call follows the same structure — master it and it becomes a repeatable system.

Call Framework

1 Rapport

Get to know them. Ask permission to proceed. Make them feel heard before you say anything about your service.

2 Frame the Call

"I'm going to ask a few questions about the business, and I'm going to ask for the full picture — this is the only way I'll know if I can help you or not. If I believe we can help you, I'll proceed with an offer. Sound good?"

3 Discovery

How many clients per month? How much profit do you want in 6 months? Where would you be today if you had a solution 6 months ago? Why have you never tried a solution like ours before? Make them feel the pain of inaction.

4 Pitch + Offer

Present your methodology. Then present the offer. Manage objections throughout. Get verbal agreements. Close the deal. Selling is a skill — treat it as one to be learned and refined.

Discovery Questions for Landscaping

- How many enquiries do you get per week right now, and how many convert?
- How many hours per week do you spend quoting, including travel?
- What type of job do you most want to be doing — and what do you want to stop doing?
- If your phone rang 3 more times per day with qualified leads, could you handle it?
- What does your busiest competitor do that you don't?
- If nothing changes in 6 months, what does that cost you in lost revenue?

The discovery phase is the most important part of the call. Do not rush it. The more they talk, the more they sell themselves.

Payment Infrastructure

Use GoCardless for recurring monthly payments. Set up direct debit mandates so payment is automatic — no chasing invoices, no awkward conversations.

Recurring Revenue Services & Retention

This is the engine of the agency. Every service below is delivered monthly, creating compounding value for the client and predictable income for you. Cancellation mechanics are built in — if they leave, they lose the infrastructure.

GBP Management

One post per week with local service area and service mentioned. Monthly job photo additions. Review responses. GBP monitoring. Monthly ranking report delivered to owner email.

Technical Maintenance

Monthly check of core web vitals, indexing status, and new technical errors. SSL certificate maintenance. Site availability monitoring. Website backups. NAP corrections across directories.

Automation Ownership

All Make.com workflows are under your account. If the client cancels, form submissions no longer trigger notifications or CRM records. The quote calculator requires programming ability to update — retained as a service asset.

Reporting + Strategy

One-page summary of all key metrics — this month vs last month vs baseline — delivered by the last day of each month. Quarterly 30-minute strategy review call every 3 months to review results and plan next quarter.

"If they cancel, they lose the website hosting, all automation workflows deactivate, and the quote calculator stops being maintained. The contract states all services provided and cancellation terms clearly."

The recurring model is the goal. Every client retained is compounding monthly revenue. Protect it with contracts, deliver results, and make leaving more painful than staying.
